CUSTER'S EXPEDITION.

Custer's expedition to the Black Hills of Dakota, the haunt and hunting ground of the wild Sioux, has led to some attractive discoveries. The Black Hills, as they are called, are not wholly within the Territory of Dakota, but extend into Wyoming, and cover an area of about one hundred miles in length by sixty in width, their highest peaks rising six thousand seven hundred feet above tide. The greater part of the Territory of Dakota is rolling prairie land, well watered, abounding in nutritious grasses, and admirably adapted to stock raising. Its greatest drawback, like that of Kansas, Minnesota, and Wyoming, is a deficiency of timber, of which there is very little, except along the borders of the streams. The only forest land is that of the Black Hills, which probably derive the name that has been given them from the dense growth of pine that lines their slopes and often crowns their lower summits. It is among these hills and the intervening valleys that game abounds, and it is because of the noble hunting they afford that the Sioux have resisted so tenaciously the intrusion of the white man into a region secured to them by treaty. But, for a long time past, reports have been current on the frontier that the Black Hills abounded in mineral wealth. The washings of the rivers passing through this region indicated the presence of gold. Adventurous explorers penetrating, at great hazard, their fastnesses had returned with specimens of gold, and oozing out from the foot hills oil springs had been discovered; but no exploring parties had ever ventured far into that region until Custer's expedition furnished the opportunity. Then it was that those who had been permitted to accompany Custer found everywhere along the line of march indications of the wealth that was hidden in the hills, and confirmed the previous reports of a gold-bearing section by obtaining the precious metal from surface washings. A correspondent, writing to the New York Tribune, describes this hitherto unknown country as possessing besides valuable mineral fields, "grass, water, and timber in abundance; the scenery lovely beyond description," and "the flora the most varied of any section this side of California." But the country, however, was not all so beautiful, or the scenery so attractive. There were occasional stretches of arid soil. From the Little Missouri to the Valley of the Belle Fourche all was desolate and barren. When, however, the Belle Fourche was reached, from that point across the hills separating Dakota from Wyoming the expedition traversed lands of rare fertility, well watered, with fine grazing grounds, and having an abundance of timber. Four days later, Custer, still in search of the raiding savages, in attempting to cross a range of hills, came suddenly upon another valley, which is thus enthusiastically described.

"I have never seen," such, too, was the testimony of all those who beheld the panorama spread out before us. Every step of our march that day was amid flowers of the most exquisite color and perfume, some belonging to new or unclassified species. The total flora of the valley embraces 125 species. The water in the streams stood at 44 degrees. This beautiful vale was named Floral Valley. We followed this valley to the foot of the western ridge of the Black Hills, winding our way through a little park of great natural beauty. There is much more to the same purpose; but this glowing account of a region hitherto untrodden by the foot of the white man is quite sufficient to excite thousands of hardy miners and frontiersmen—Sioux or no Sioux, treaty or no treaty—to seize and occupy a country having gold and silver in its hills, lead in other places, rich deposits of salt in its northern section, great veins of coal on the Missouri river, petroleum, springs, and valleys, well watered and wooded, singularly fertile, covered with nutritious grasses and glorified with flowers that rival those of Florida and California in variety and beauty.—Baltimore Gazette.

AUGUST COURT.—August Court has come and gone. Another of Louisiana's ancient holidays, a mile post on the course of Time, has been passed. On Monday last scores and hundreds of the people of this country, with the same joyous tread that inspired their fathers in ye ancient times, made their annual pilgrimage to the Country-seat, bringing with them their children, and their children's children, thus perpetuating in the mind of the rising generation a sacred love for a simple custom as ancient as the Country itself, and beautiful because of its antiquity. We know not in what it originated—we are ignorant of the causes that set apart August Court as pre-eminently entitled above all the other Courts of the year to such distinguished consideration—and perhaps the oldest citizen now living would be as much puzzled as we are, to answer the question. Still, it is pleasant to contemplate its recurrence. To consider that amid the ravages of Time—the destruction of institutions and customs co-existent with the Commonwealth, there is at least one day in the year on which we can return to first principles, and with all the fullness and freshness of youth, wend our way to the court-green, and participate in enjoyments that once gave delight to thousands who have since "crossed the river," knowing no other reason for it, and caring for no other save a simple knowledge that "Father did it. Long may it survive.

The crowd on Monday was not as large as we have seen, but was amply sufficient to attest that the people still retain a lively admiration for one of the landmarks of the past. At an early hour every available space around the public square, was occupied by men, women and children, with tables and stands from whence to deal their small wares, principally of something to eat, and soon the crowd began to swell in numbers until our streets were thronged with white faces, and black, of both sexes, until there was before us a solid mass of living, breathing humanity. The usual amount of melons and other edibles and fluids were disposed of, but we have never seen a more quiet gathering on similar occasions. There were few drunken men, no boisterous ones, and throughout the day there was not a solitary arrest for a breach of the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth.—London Mirror.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

Nearly all diseases originate from Indigestion and Torpidity of the Liver, and relief is always anxiously sought after. If the Liver is Regulated in its action, health is almost invariably secured. Want of action in the Liver causes Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Chills, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, bad taste in the mouth, bilious attacks, paleness, and a hundred other symptoms, for which SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR is the best remedy that has ever been discovered. Its action is mild, effectual, and being a simple vegetable compound, can do no injury in any quantities that it may be taken. It is harmless in every way; it has been used for FORTY YEARS, and hundreds of the good and great from all parts of the country will vouch for its being the purest and best.

SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, OR MEDICINE.
Is harmless.
Is no drastic violent medicine.

SUMMER RESORTS.
THE BEVERIDGE HOUSE,
Middleburg, Virginia.
The undersigned has leased this fine Hotel, and will open it for the reception of guests on the 1st of July, 1874.
It is a large and handsome house of 25 rooms; the parlor, dining room and chambers are large and airy, and furnished in good style.
Middleburg is one of the prettiest and most healthy towns in Piedmont Virginia. It is situated in Loudoun county, 40 miles from Washington city, 16 miles from Leesburg, and 8 miles from The Plains station, O. & A. M. R. R., from which two points there are daily stages over well graded turnpike roads.
A MINERAL SPRING near the town has effected many cures of Dyspepsia, and is pronounced by the physicians of this section to be equal to any water in the State for this and kindred diseases.
The house will be kept in the best style, and every effort will be made to give entire satisfaction, and the charges will be moderate.
A LIVERY STABLE and BAR will be attached, and the Bar will be furnished with the best Wines, Liquors, Cigars, &c., that can be procured in the country.
For further information address
